Leader In Me Students of the Month

Begin With the End in Mind was the October Leader in Me habit of the month. Students recognized for this award are goal setters. They plan ahead, think about their choices and begin with the end in mind.Students earning this award include: Eleanor Holloway(PK), Brooks Windhorst(K), Barrett Ascherl(1st), Ellery Young(2nd), Bryn Calvert(3rd), Riley Windhorst(4th), and Jaycee Smith(5th).

Gering Clowns

The Gering Clowns, a group of 8th graders committed to helping younger students learn the importance of making good choices, including avoiding drug use, visited St. Agnes School on Tuesday, October 27th. The clowns spoke to the students about making healthy choices and standing up to peer pressure then played some fun games with the students. It was a great learning experience for both the younger and older students.

Halloween Festivities

Friday, October 30th marked the day for celebrating Halloween at St. Agnes School. Students excitedly donned a variety of costumes to parade around the block for their parents, families and friends. They then enjoyed games and snacks, provided by various parents, for their classroom parties. It was a fun celebration. Thanks to all who joined us for the parade, and provided food, games and fun for our parties.

Second Grade Class
by Meghan Calvert

Lots of fun and learning is happening in 2nd grade. We recently just got to lead mass! It was a big responsibility, and the students did an amazing job. 2nd grade also just presented their Saint Reports. The students worked so hard on them, and it was fun to finally see them dressed as their saints and present them to their families. The students also sang the song, Someday I'll be a Saint, after all the reports were given. It is a beautiful song about how one day we could all be a saint, if we just love and walk like Jesus did.

In math, we are learning all about different strategies to use when adding two-digit numbers. Students are learning to decompose by place value and how to use base-ten blocks. They are also learning the standard algorithm.

In growth mindset, we have been working on being kind and how to give a real apology. Students read the book Cindayella, and then we worked on different ways to apologize to one another. We learned that we can't just say "I'm sorry" and then walk away. When we apologize, we have to look at the person, tell them what we are sorry for and how we will change our actions in the future.

For art, the students created a piece for All Souls Day. Students used chalk and oil pastels to create souls waiting in Purgatory and the angels above. They came out beautiful with many of the students saying this was their favorite art project so far.

November is finally here and it will be filled with so many fun activities!

Fifth Grade Class
by Nancy Riesen

Time is flying by in the fifth-grade classroom! In that time, we have accomplished great things!

The fifth graders start their day with a bellringer. The entire week's bellringer is focused on the virtue of the week. This week it was thankfulness, so they have a question to answer, or a scenario to consider and comment on that is based on thankfulness.

In math, it has been all about decimals. Building on previous lessons, they have become experts at understanding the correct terminology for numbers that are located right of the decimal.

We are continuing our physical science unit, learning more about everything, in one word – MATTER.

We are about to wrap up a chapter in social studies and continue further into the new world!

Sadly, we have not had a lot of opportunities to work on art, but we will resume it next week.

Filming for the premier was a success, and the fifth graders showed excellent leadership for the younger students.

Spanish class was Halloween themed, where students took turns reading spooky stories in English and listening in Spanish.

We finished the week out with an amazing Halloween party!
